ERNEST F. BISBEE

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Miss Louise Demeritt of Bethel held at her home Thursday evening, Feb. 8, a most entertaining birthday party. Her guests arrived between seven-thirty and eight o'clock and from that time until nearly midnight there were no lagging moments or cessation of entertainment.

The evening program began with a real song-fest at which everyone joined with a spirit and gusto worthy of professionals. A great many current popular song hits were sung and resung, and gradually the singing lapsed back to the soothing songs of yesteryear. Miss Demeritt proved a fine and able pianist, lending the incentive to sing which is required for many.

Following the singing, games were played with a reckless abandon that served as an outlet for pent-up energy. Before the games began to lull the guests were ushered into the dining room where a gorgeous birthday table was most attractively laid for twelve guests. Place cards daintily adorned with a pink rose directed each guest to their place. The soft light from tall candles was the only illumination, lending a feeling of coziness and tranquillity to the supper.

The supper featured two birthday cakes, one being made by Mrs. Demeritt, mother of the hostess, and the other by Miss Julia Brown. Miss Brown's cake was a veritable masterpiece of culinary art. It was a round checkerboard cake, artistically decorated with pink, orchid and yellow icing.

The hostess was the recipient of many dainty and practical birthday gifts from friends and family.

Those present besides Miss Demeritt and family were the Misses Beatrice Brown, Julia Brown, Eva Ladd, Dorothy Parsons, and Marlon Parsons; Cecil Conrod, Glen Smith, Edward Poole, Sidney Chamberlain, Joe Holt and Charles Freeman.

EASY ACES HONOR MRS. THELMA VAN WITH PARTY

On Friday, Feb. 9, Mrs. Winona Cutler entertained the Easy Aces at a supper party and shower in honor of Mrs. Thelma Van. This charming affair was a complete surprise to the guest of honor, who arrived at 6:30 to find the other members of the club awaiting her in the dining room, seated at a beautifully decorated, candle lighted table. The hand made place cards were pink and white with appropriate design, the nut baskets which were also hand made were in the form of pink roses, and the centerpiece was made up of a variety of dainty pink and white flowers.

After the delicious supper was enjoyed, Mrs. Van was ushered to the living room where she found a basket in the shape of a huge pink and white rose, filled with lovely and useful gifts. When the many packages had been opened and admired the group finished the evening with bridge. Mrs. Jane Van won the first prize, Mrs. Ruth Carver the second, and Mrs. Olive Lurvey received the consolation prize.

In spite of the extremely cold weather, all members of the club were present, and in their happiness for one of their number, it is safe to say that the Easy Aces have never spent a more delightful evening together.

Fire, which destroyed a three-story wooden building at Waterville last Thursday evening, drove 31 people living in the building into 15 below zero weather. No injuries were reported.

WINTER CARNIVAL AT RUMFORD THIS WEEK

Gould Stars Are Entered in Inter-scholastic Meet—Governor To Crown Carnival Queen

The Chisholm Skiing and Outing Club of Rumford is staging its 11th Annual Winter Carnival on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 17-18, this year; an event which in past years has attracted people from all parts of the east. Star performers will gather here to compete for New England ski jumping honors while Maine boys will center their interest on the Maine Ski Jumping and Cross Country Cup which will go back into circulation.

The interscholastic meet, with more than nine schools entered, of which Gould Academy is one, promises to be one of the greatest of its kind ever held in the state.

Saturday night the Carnival Queen will be crowned amid royal splendor by Governor Brann at the ice castle on the skating rink. From there the procession will move to the municipal hall where the Carnival Ball is to be held.

A featured attraction on the program will be seen on the first night when Finn Sorensen will ski down the big jump, illuminated by spot lights, and leap through a ring of fire some distance from the take-off.

Fancy skating, ice racing, and hockey are listed among the ice events, while horse racing enthusiasts will get their fill of their favorite sport scheduled for Saturday.

Every effort is being made by Carnival officials to make the 11th Annual Winter Carnival a revival of the great carnivals of the past. The interest that is being displayed bears the indications of that destination.

WAYS AND MEANS CLUB

The regular meeting of the Ways and Means Club of the O. E. S. will be held at three o'clock, Feb. 21st, at the home of the president, Mrs. Irving L. Carver. Officers for the coming year will be elected and annual dues are payable. The business meeting will be followed by a brief program and tea served by the hostess and Mrs. E. P. Lyon. All members of the Chapter and Club are cordially invited to be present.

FOOTLIGHT CLUB PLAY NEXT TUESDAY

All-Star Cast to Present Mystery Comedy, "The Yellow Shadow," To Local Audience

Rehearsals for "The Yellow Shadow," to be given by the Bethel Footlight Club at Odeon Hall, next Tuesday, Feb. 20, are going smoothly and all members of the cast are well equipped for their special parts.

Mrs. O. H. Anderson as the junior lead promises an unusually good performance. Miss Gwendolyn Stearns needs no recommendation to playgoers who saw her in "Funny Phinale." A fine character part is portrayed by Mrs. Herbert R. Bean, and do not miss the opportunity of seeing Karl Stearns as a Chinaman.

The sound effects and off-stage noises add much to this play. The scenery is new and different and every part is well taken, as follows: Nell Travis, Mrs. Sherman Allen, Jed Travis, Donald Kellogg, Mildred Marvin.

Mrs. Laurence Lord, Herbert Marvin, Harold Marshall, Alice Perkins, Mrs. O. H. Anderson, Hazel Wayne, Miss Gwen Stearns, Gilbert Wright, Dr. R. O. Hood, Sheriff Macklin, Earle Eldredge, J. Steel, Mrs. H. R. Bean, Wong Song, Karl Stearns

Seats are now on sale at Bosserman's drug store, at popular prices. New specialties.

MRS. NORA MARSDEN

Mrs. Nora Marsden passed away at the St. Louis Hospital, Berlin, Feb. 8, after a three days' illness.

She was born in Bethel 70 years ago, the daughter of Gustave and Maria (Sanborn) Burbank. She was a graduate nurse of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and following her marriage lived at Dorchester, Mass. Later for many years she was superintendent of nurses in a Philadelphia hospital. About 10 years ago she returned to Bethel to care for her mother, and after her death remained here with her sister, Miss Nellie Burbank.

Besides her sister, she leaves a brother, Morton Burbank of New York, and several cousins.

Funeral services were held at Greenleaf's funeral rooms Sunday afternoon, Rev. R. C. Dalzell officiating.

MOTHERS' CLUB

The Mothers' Club met with Mrs. Chester Kimball Wednesday afternoon and the following program was enjoyed:

Scripture Prayer Paper on St. Valentine, written by Mrs. Robert York and read by Mrs. Norman Hall Reading, Living with Our Children, Members of Club

Poem, "Lincoln," Mrs. Parker Conner

Poem, "Lincoln's Birthday," Mrs. Annie Craig

Poem, "A Maine Farmer Remembers Lincoln," Mrs. R. C. Dalzell

Banquet and Program Presented at Congregational Church Monday Evening—District Scout Executive Present

There was a large attendance at the first Father's-Mother's Night of Troop 165, B. S. A., which was held at the Congregational Church Monday evening. At 6.30 a complete banquet was served in the dining room, which was followed by an interesting and varied program in Garland Chapel.

Several selections were given by the newly formed Scout Orchestra, which included the following: Murray Thurston, cornet; Talbot Crane, clarinet; Parker Brown, saxophone; Rodney Eames, violin; Cecil Wentzel, guitar; Dana Brooks, drums; with Mrs. D. Grover Brooks at the piano. Their offerings won the well deserved applause of the audience.

An exhibition of Knot Tying was given by Stanley Brown, Edward Robertson, Irving Brown, and Donald Brown. First Aid was exemplified by O'Neil Robertson, assisted by Dana Brooks, Talbot Crane and Frank Littlehale. Signalling by the semaphore method was given by Erland Wentzel and Chandler Dalzell, and Royden Keddy and Erland Wentzel used the flashlight and code. These exhibitions held the close interest of all present and were much appreciated.

At the close of the exhibitions remarks were offered by Earl A. Davis, member of the Troop Committee, who in the absence of the chairman, H. H. Hastings, announced the election of Edwin Brown as Assistant Scoutmaster; also Rev. R. C. Dalzell of the Methodist Church, Rev. L. A. Edwards of the Congregational Church, and Carl Brown of the Oxford County Section Committee, who spoke of the progress of local Scouting and its possibilities in the future.

Scoutmaster Bean then introduced A. Kenneth McCartney of Lewiston, District Scout Executive, who gave a very interesting talk on the purposes of Scouting and the manner of its organization. At the close of his talk he presented the Troop with the President Roosevelt Award, which is given to troops meeting requirements as to programs followed, Scouts reregistered, and new members enrolled.

In closing Mr. Bean thanked the members of the banquet committee for their successful efforts and called upon Dale Thurston to render a cornet solo, showing that all the musical talent in the troop was not included in the orchestra.

WEST PARIS AND VICINITY

REV. R. H. COLBY TO TEACH WEST PARIS 44 CLASS

Rev. A. E. Maxell has resigned his position as teacher of the Men's 44 Bible Class on account of ill health, and Rev. R. H. Colby, pastor of the Congregational Church, South Paris, has accepted the position of teacher. The class very much regret Mr. Maxell's being obliged to take a rest, but feel very fortunate in securing Mr. Colby. After a needed rest Mr. Maxell will continue his work with the United Parish Church.

The 44 Class will hold their regular entertainment at Centennial Hall, Thursday evening, Feb. 15, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. John H. Skilton of Portland will be the speaker. A mixed program will precede the address and the class band will be in attendance. All men and boys twelve years of age and over are invited to attend.

POETRY ENGAGES ATTENTION OF BATES LITERARY CLUB

The Bates Literary Club was entertained Friday afternoon by Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes and the program was as follows:

West Paris—High Street

Archibald Waltanen of the C. C. C. Camp at Southwest Harbor spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. Mary Waltanen.

Elmer Ingalls is harvesting his ice.

Howard Hill has been confined to the house with a bad cold.

Ralph Whitman was home from his work at Pinhook Sunday.

Mrs. Ellen Paappa and boy spent the past week with Mrs. Roland Benson.

A crew of the C. W. A. men after the brown-tail moth, have been working on High Street this week.

GREENWOOD CITY

Doris Hayes, who is working at West Paris, was at home for the week end.

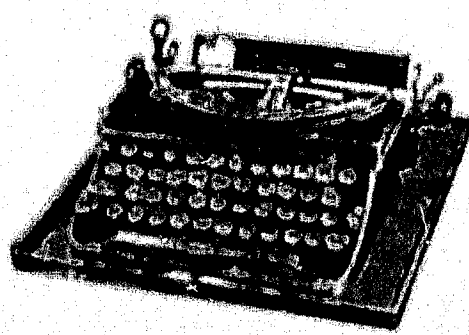

Delphina Whitman was at home from her studies at West Paris High School the last of the week because of illness.

After the cold weather and wind blows this last week finds some of the roads here with drifts five and six feet deep. The tractor is expected through some time soon, however.

Leona Curtis and Delphina Whitman are to participate in the prize speaking at West Paris High School on next Thursday evening.

Robert Morgan spent last week at Locke Mills as the selectmen are making up the town report.

Kalle Kyllonen and son, Viljo, have returned home from their work in New Hampshire and are now working for Antti Niskinen.

WEST PARIS

There will be a public supper for the benefit of the Arthur Lewis Mann Memorial Library at I. O. O. F. Hall on Friday evening, Feb. 23. The supper will precede the weekly dance of the Parisian Orchestra.

Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes will be hostess to the Friendly Class on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 22. A penny lunch will be enjoyed and mystery packages sold.

The Glad Hand Class met Tuesday evening with Rev. E. B. Forbes. The class is increasing in interest and attendance.

Mrs. A. Estella Fifield suffered a paralytic shock on Monday forenoon which paralyzed her left side. Mrs. Gladys Ross Cummings, a trained nurse, Mrs. Cornelia Wheeler and Mrs. Kimball of Bethel are assisting with the duties of the home and her niece, Mrs. E. L. Brown of Bethel, is with her. On March 3d of last year her husband, D. H. Fifield, suffered a shock from which he died ten days later.

Latest word from Miss Minnie Lane, who broke her hip 12 weeks ago is that she is improving although yet unable to walk.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Day were given a variety shower Monday evening. About 40 were present and they received many nice gifts.

Mrs. Leroy Abbott of North Paris was a guest Monday of Mrs. H. W. Chapman.

George W. Ridlon is in very poor health.

Mrs. L. H. Emery had the misfortune to have her hand caught Monday morning in an electric wringer. Although no bones were broken the hand was bruised and blackened.

Regular meeting of Daughters of Union Veterans will be held at the I. O. O. F. Hall, Monday evening, Feb. 19, at 7:30 P. M.

MEN'S SUPPER BIG EVENT OF WEST PARIS SOCIAL SEASON

Although the weather was extremely severe a good number patronized the Men's Supper at the Universalist Church Friday evening. It was certainly the outstanding event of the year. An excellent supper of cold meat, mashed potatoes, salads, assorted cakes, pies and coffee was served in first class order, entirely by the men. The favors were flags and napkins to match.

Good Will Hall was beautifully decorated in red, white and blue. A picture of Lincoln, suitably draped, occupied the stage. The beautiful decorations were done by O. E. Desareo of Beverly, Mass. The Parisian Orchestra rendered music throughout the supper hour and Linwood Andrews entertained with cowboy songs which he has formerly broadcasted over the radio.

4-H BAKING CONTEST TO BE HELD IN JULY

A county 4-H baking contest will be held in July. This contest is open to any girl enrolled in the Senior Cooking and Housekeeping project in 1934 who has completed two years of club work in this project. All entrants must enroll with their county extension agent as soon as possible.

Each contestant will be required to make one recipe of either baking powder biscuits or a plain two-egg cake before the judges. She will also be required to exhibit at this contest six biscuits or one cake which she has made previous to the contest and according to recipes furnished by the County Extension Agents. If she exhibits biscuits she must make the cake, or vice versa.

The County winner will be eligible to attend the State Camp at Orono and participate in the statewide contest where prizes are be-

"THE MYSTERIOUS VALENTINE" GIVEN BY WEST PARIS CLASS

The Junior Class of West Paris High School held a Valentine social and box supper at the school building Wednesday, Feb. 14.

A one act sketch entitled "The Mysterious Valentine" preceded the auctioneering of boxes and games. The cast of characters was as follows:

Maude Warren, Enni Lilmatta
Betsy Warren, Delphina Whitman
Jane Warren, Ida Oman
May Warren, Hilma Mikkonen
The Ice man, Matti Korhonen
A Negro, Walter Heikkinen
A Book Agent, Helge Mustonen
A Beggar, Aubrey Cole

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Sunday, Feb. 11. Rather cloudy this morning but afternoon brought the return of sunshine.

The third coldest day so far this winter was Feb. 9th, and many a Simple Simon forgetting to let the water run during the night time found himself waterless next day.

Roy Coffin spent the week end with his sister, Mrs. Evelyn Barrett, and family here at South Woodstock.

Mrs. Velma Brown Davis of Davis homestead was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Brown, several days over the week end. Mrs. Jessie Andrews, Mrs. Angie Robbins and Mrs. Velma Davis were in Norway on a shopping trip one day last week.

Miss Dorris Coffin of North Woodstock was a week end visitor in South Woodstock.

The C. W. A. project work nears completion this week. The men are looking fine, showing that life in the open has its results—good appetites and good health.

The brown tail moth gatherers, Homer Farnum, Chas. Dunham, and John Brown of Bryant Pond were here at South Woodstock last week. A very few moth nests were found and scarcely a tree condemned in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendall Roberts and family, who have been living for the past year with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Felt, will soon move to Locke Mills where they have a rent in the house of "Pete" Coolidge on the East Bethel road.

The Willing Workers met with Mrs. Vera Buck at her cosy home Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 7. Not as many as usual were in attendance but when it was learned that three quilts had been tacked by the nine women present we must realize that every moment was profitably spent. One quilt was tacked for Mrs. Evelyn Barrett, one for Mrs. Vera Buck, one for the Workers. Following the completion of the quilt work refreshments were served and all repaired to their respective homes feeling that for the number present and the amount of work done this meeting would certainly go down in Willing Workers' history as an unprecedented record.

India's Insect Soldiers Fight With Their Nooses

New species of insect soldiers from India that fight with their "nooses" have been described from the collections of the Smithsonian institution by a termite specialist of the bureau of entomology.

Most of the termite families produce a special soldier class, the members of which differ radically in structure from their nest mates and have no other function except fighting.

In some of the species found by Dr. Snyder these fighters have a protrusion on the front of the head which looks like a long nose but which actually is developed from a primitive third eye and from which a sticky acid is exuded. In rare instances it may be thrown for a short distance in case of loss.

These soldiers, belonging to the highly specialized genus of Nasut-itermes, fight their way to the death with various ants which invade their nest and cause, although the appearance is very similar, are not even remotely related to them.

In the case of the termite soldier ranks with his no-like organ
the so-called "pedicel" of the ant,
the narrowest part of its body, smearing it with the liquid. The ant is rendered helpless.

This liquid is a powerful acid, but is not the well known formic acid exuded by ants. It is produced in specialized form only by the soldier caste.

All Exhibitions Do Not Receive Noisy Cheering

Crowds do not usually cheer a fine exhibition of intellectual power, but that may be merely because those who can appreciate intellectual power are not usually demonstrative, observes a columnist in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The gentification of the perceptive and reasoning faculties is an inner emotion, if we can call it "emotion." The studious and thoughtful mind works silently. When moved, it more often expresses itself with the pen, and finds no outlet in loud shouts. Excitement it may have, but repressed.

There is a clef to between the higher thoughts that stimulate and the rushing ones that agitate the feelings. We yell when our hearts are stirred and make no demonstration when the conviction of spiritual force is conveyed to the brain. One must not think that because there are no whoops by the assemblage it is certain that the individual members are completely comprehending.

Words Used by Criminals

Foreign words are often corrupted both in spelling and pronunciation when used by criminals, but nevertheless serve admirably the purpose for which they are intended. Thus, a cant term for five, comes from the German fünf; fifty, a girl,
is from the French fille, a daughter;
bosh (now a colloquial expression)
is from the Turkish bosh empty; gelt, money, is from the German gold or the Dutch gelt, and gonof,
a thief, is taken without change from the Hebrew. Kiosk is possibly from one of two Dutch words, kiosk,
a drinking cup, or kiosk, to tipple.
Chow, food, is from the Chinese.

Kipling's "Recessional" Honoring Queen Victoria

Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional" was first published in London Times of July 17, 1897. The occasion which brought it out was the diamond jubilee commemorating the sixtieth anniversary of the coronation of Queen Victoria.

"The celebration was most magnificent in splendor and extravagant in expense," writes Walm-an Barbe in "Famous Poems Explained." "Rejoicing in the worldly pride and power of Britain on land and sea was the chief characteristic of the event, and for the time being any higher power seemed to be forgotten.

"At the close of the celebration
Rudyard Kipling published the Recessional, and it had wonderful effect in sobering the nation and bringing the more thoughtful persons to a true conception of national and personal responsibility.

"It was read from a multitude of pulpits, and soon everybody was repeating it. No other poem of our time has had such immediate or such deep influence. It is doubtless the greatest hymn of this generation.

"The title is fitting. The recess-ional hymn is the hymn sung after the service as the singers return in procession to the robing room; and Mr. Kipling's poem was written to be read after the celebration."

Music Revives Memories of Places or Incidents

A very great part of the pleasure people take in music comes from the association it revives, says a writer in Harper's Magazine. These may follow one another as continuously as the flow of music itself, never, perhaps, taking full possession of our consciousness, but stirring within us.

What awakens them? Where do they come from? A few notes that recall an old song, not all the melody, but its spirit and the feel of the pace and the years where it was sung. Or it may be a certain beat in the music that you would swear now fills your ears, and yet at the same time rouses within you a movement from elsewhere, a sawing of the arm you have known, a remembered tread, the grace of the dance, or the march of soldiers.
The reverie may be vague to the point of unconsciousness, yet it goes on. Glance at the faces about you while listening to music. On most of them, even on those whose attention looks most pointed, you will see the haze of a dream.

Always Falls on Her Feet

If a cat has to learn to climb down a tree, she can fall instinctively on her feet. Science now affirms the instinctive capacity which tradition has always assigned to the cat to land on her feet. The falling reflex of cats has been measured and reported in the American Journal of Physiology. The fact is verified by one who experimented by dropping cats held in a horizontal position from varying distances to a soft bed of straw. All the cats were able to turn perfectly even when the distance of the fall was less than one foot. Motion pictures show that the cat first contracts her forelegs and then turns her forepaws around. Then she contracts her hind legs, extends the forelegs and gives the hind part a turn. The cat can turn herself through any angle by continuing contractions of this kind. Even when unable to see, the cat's reactions were about as perfect and as quick.

Produces Most Wine

France is the largest wine producing country in the world. In all of the 14 French departments, except a dozen, the farthest north and northeast, wines are grown and vines raised. The average production of wine in France is over 100,000, 000 gallons yearly. Italy is the second largest wine producing country and she is also the second largest vine consuming country, so that the surplus of Italian wines available for export is comparatively small.
The greater majority of Italian wines are beverages of no particular acert and are consumed while practically young.

King Solomon Was Second Judean Monarchy Ruler

Solomon, the son of David, who succeeded his father on the throne of Israel and ruled from 974 until 937 B. C., was the second ruler in the Judean monarchy, and was of that branch of the white race which settled in Palestine in prehistoric times. Modern Jews are descended from the same stock, says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine.

The assertion sometimes heard that Solomon was of the black race is no doubt founded on the fact that Ras Tafari, ruler of Abyssinia, claims to be a descendant of King Solomon. This claim is no doubt well founded, for the civilization and culture of Ethiopia (now Abyssinia) parallels that of Egypt, and early records and legends may be given historical credence. The queen of Sheba visited Solomon when he was king, and from their son, Menelik, the kings of Abyssinia claim direct descent. There are unmistakable traces of white blood in the Ethiopian aristocracy.

Bird-Eating Spiders

The London zoo has been enriched by a large number of bird-eating and other "out-size" spiders.
A constant supply is provided by the many lines of banana boats but notably those that come from Jamaica. As one explores the tier upon tier of holds in these ships, containing in all some 1,500 tons of fruit, these 6 to 8-inch-long spiders make a weird spectacle as they skate over the walls or sit waiting for the small birds which never appear. Some of the species can give a very severe bite, and dozens perish at the hands of the crew for every single one that arrives at the Revere's park monastery. Zoo spiders become very tame, allowing themselves to be handled by the keepers.

HERE AND THERE IN MAINE

C. W. A. employment in the State has been ordered to cease today as available funds for the work is exhausted. Whether the work will be resumed depends on whether Congress authorizes additional money to continue work until May 15. The cessation of this work in the State will affect approximately 22,500 men and women.

Ernest Ellis of Wilton, who was sentenced to 60 days in jail charged with intoxication and attacking a deputy sheriff, committed suicide Tuesday by slashing his throat with a razor, in his cell at the county jail.

Maine rabbits are not to be imported into Massachusetts by order of Raymond J. Kenney, director of the State Division of Fisheries and Game of Massachusetts. This move is to prevent the possible introduction of rabbit poisoning. This disease is very rare but was known to exist in the western states. Recently a Maine trapper died of it.

Fire destroyed the Oxford Grand Hall at Welchville Saturday afternoon. Volunteers saved dishes, piano and other furnishings belonging to the Grange. The total loss was estimated at $7,500.

Eastport's last Civil War veteran,
Henry H. Wadsworth, died Feb. 14
at the age of 90 years.

Maine received its first Federal emergency relief grant during January, a total of $1,251,414. Of this amount $22,400 was allotted for educational programs. Only eight other states received less than Maine from the F. B. R. A grant for motor vehicle and operators' receipts for 1933 totaled $2,900,000, decrease of about $45,000 compared with 1932. However, receipts in 1934 thus far run $12,000 over the corresponding period last year.

During the first day of Portland drive against traffic violators, police tagged 129. All but two paid fine of 50 cents each to avoid court appearance.

Charles R. Flint, 84, who recently died in a Washington hotel, was rated as one of the wealthiest men in the United States. He was a native of Thomaston, Maine, and was widely known throughout the country as the "Father of Trusts."

HOLY YEAR TO ADD FOUR MORE SAINTS

Canonization Is Impressive Vatican Scene.

Vatican City.—Holy year will see four new saints added to the long list of the Catholic calendar as well as a number of new "blesseds," which is the rank of sanctity immediately below that of a saint.

To become a saint in the Catholic church is a difficult matter, and the various processes which lead eventually to the candidate being given what are called "honors of the altar" may last as long as a century. This is not, of course, the average period required, but there have been cases which have taken as long, or even longer.

Three Steps Necessary.

"Venerable," "Blessed" and "Saint" are the three steps in the scale of sanctity.

The sacred congregation of rites is the ecclesiastical office which deals with canonizations, and the whole procedure has a close analogy to the proceedings in a court of justice.

There is a "prosecutor" for the person whose claims to sanctity are examined, and this office corresponds closely to that of the lawyer for the plaintiff.

There also is the devil's advocate, whose office has a sort of resemblance to that of a state's attorney. The duty of the devil's advocate in canonization trials is to pick holes in the case.

When a person has been made "blessed" by the church, the day comes when he or she is to be added to the dignity of the altar.

A solemn ceremony takes place for the purpose at the Vatican, where the pope holds what is known as a semi-secret consistory. Seated on his throne in the hall of benedictions, his holiness faces an assembly of cardinals, patriarchs, archbishops, and bishops. All the bishops within a radius of one hundred miles are summoned.

Cardinals on Hand.

Grouped around are the cardinals. They wear their red robes surmounted with ermine capes. On their heads are small red skull caps.

A monsignor of the sacred congregation of rites introduces the name of the "process" to the consistory. Then the pope delivers a brief address, extolling the virtues and holiness of the person.

The voting which then follows is in a very formal, for the congregation of rites already takes for granted the agreement of the cardinals and bishops to the proposed honor.

The holy father asks the assembled cardinals and bishops for their approval of the title of saint for a candidate. The cardinals answer by removing their little red skull caps.

Doctors Restore Girl's Speech by Hypnotism

Channah, Ohio.—Resorting to hypnosis, Dr. Meyer Zeligs and Dr. Mel Welborn of the General Hospital here, restored her speech to a thirteen-year-old girl.

When the girl, deprived of speech by a mysterious paralysis of her vocal cords, failed to respond to various treatments, the doctor resorted to a formula of passes and trances associated with the occult.

She was placed on an operating table and commanded to "sleep." "You have no feeling in your skin at this point," one of the physicians told her. He pressed a pin into the spot indicated. There was no response.

"Speak!" was the next command. The girl's mouth opened and she spoke.

Our Story Hotel to Be Highest in the World

Alma, Colo.—A hotel which its designers claim will be the "highest" of any size in the world is under construction here.

The building which will house the offices of the Climax Molybdenum Company, world's largest producer of molybdenum, will be only four stories from foundation to eaves. It will be much loftier than the State building in New York.

The answer is, of course, that this town is 11,900 feet above sea level.

GOULD ACADEMY NOTES

In Chapel Tuesday morning, Doctor Hangcom announced the cast for "The Florist Shop," a one act play which Gould Academy will present in the District Play Contest to be held in Bethel sometime in March. ARTHUR C. WIGHT

Arthur C. Wight was born in Newry, January 20, 1873, the son of the late Willard Barker and Sarah King Wight.

When a very young man Mr. Wight decided to learn the blacksmith's trade, and nearly 27 years ago he opened a shop in Hanover, where he soon built up a successful business. His innate fondness for horses, his natural ability as a mechanic, his devotion to his task of honest labor, and his endeavor to serve his customers faithfully and well won for him an enviable reputation, bringing him patronage from a large territory.

Mr. Wight's marriage on October 1, 1910 to Miss Elvora Holt of Hanover resulted in a union of unflinching loyalty and devotion.

He had not been well for many years but, reluctant to give up his much-loved work, he continued his business till the fall of 1932, when he was forced to abandon his duties. In December, 1932, he underwent a critical surgical operation from which he never recovered. Since that time he has patiently endured intense pain and suffering. Everything that medical aid and loving care could do has been done to make him comfortable, but to no avail. The friendship and devotion of his loved physician, Dr. W. B. Twaddle, who unselfishly gave his time and strength in his efforts to relieve the suffering of a patient and friend whose cooperation and loyalty were an incentive to the highest endeavor were a sustaining power and comfort to Mr. Wight. His entrance into rest on the evening of February seventh, approached calmly and peacefully, was the end of a struggle valiantly fought. None but his devoted wife, who was ever at his side, can know the significance of these words.

Of a quiet, unassuming nature, Mr. Wight always shrank from publicity in any form, but his kindness, his gentleness, his thoughtfulness, his generosity and his unimpeachable honesty won for him a host of friends who have sympathized with him and his during his illness.

His home and his family were ever first in his thought but he never lacked in his consideration for others, and many have been the little kind and generous deeds performed, oft times unknown to those who knew him best.

Besides his wife he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Willard B. Wight, three brothers, George K. of Framingham, Mass., Lon E. and Fred W. of Newry, and one sister, Miss Carrie M. Wight of Newry.

Funeral services were held from the home on Saturday afternoon conducted by Dr. S. S. Greenleaf. Rev. Ronald S. Irons spoke words of comfort to the family and friends, paying tribute to a life well-lived, patient and heroic through suffering. The many beautiful flowers were indeed a fitting tribute for one who so much enjoyed these gifts of nature and for which, so generously supplied by his friends during his long illness, Mr. Wight was most appreciative and grateful.

Interment was in the family lot in Hanover.

THE LITTLE DOG UNDER THE WAGON

"Come, wife," said good old Farmer Grey,
"Put on your things. 'Tis market day.
Let's be off to the nearest town;
There and back, ere the sun goes down."
"Spot?" "No, we'll leave old Spot behind."
Old Spot, he barked, and Spot, he whined,
And soon made up his doggish mind
To steal away, under the wagon.

Away they went at a good, round pace,
And joy came into the farmer's face,
And joy came into the farmer's face,
"Poor Spot," said he, "did want to come;
But I'm very glad he's left at home.
He'll guard the house and guard the cot
And keep the cattle out of the lot."
"I'm not so sure of that," growled Spot,
The little dog under the wagon.

The farmer, all his produce sold,
And got his pay in yellow gold,
Then started home, just after dark,
Home through a lonely forest.
Hark! a robber springs from behind a tree!
"Your money, or else your life!" cried he.
The moon was out, yet he did not see
The little dog under the wagon.

And Spot, he barked, and Spot, he whined,
And Spot, he grabbed the thief behind.
He held with a whisk and bound
Till he could not rise from the mucky ground,
While his hands and feet the farmer bound,
And tumbled him into the wagon.

Old Spot, he saved the farmer's life,
The farmer's money, the farmer's wife,
And now a hero, grand and gay,
A silver collar he wears today,
And everywhere his master goes,
Among his friends or among his foes,
He follows along on his horny toes,
The little dog under the wagon.

IGNORANCE IS BLISS

I do not care to poke and pry,
To critically analyze,
To know the wherefore and the why
That things are good or other wise.
I take them as they seem to be,
And do not put them to the touch.
Don't trouble to explain to me,
I do not want to know too much.

If people shake me by the hand
And greet me with a beaming smile,
And make me clearly understand
They're fond of me and like my style,
It always tickles me, I find,
My friends I always hold as such.
Don't tell me they've an axe to grind,
I do not want to know too much.

THE PATH OF LIFE

Charles H. Meiers

The Path of Life is like a path that leads Into the wilderness, Who dares go Beyond the beaten trail that others know
Must blaze that trail with sacrifice and deeds,
That eke out knowledge of his life or needs
To those that follow. What his trail must show
Is access to the wilds of Truth marked so
"Twill safely guide men forth beyond the meads:

How few men venture out beyond the last Familiar mark upon the well-known trail!
"Tis he who has the courage to go past
This sign that cannot in his mission fail—
He will have left at least one mark behind
To guide some other brave exploring mind.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Tom Jordan, young New England newspaper reporter in love with Jessica Foote, is barred from becoming an acknowledged sailor because of conditions of his father's will that her husband must match her small fortune with his own. To do this, Jordan has a wild hope of wealth from the salvage of a long-sunken French corvette.

CHAPTER II.—To Doctor White, Jessica's guardian, Jordan reveals his hope. The doctor is skeptical but for Tom's sake hopeful. Jessica tells them of an encounter she had with an ill-mannered sailor, and Tom's ire is aroused. Two Frenchmen, the comte De Corlay and his son Robert, make their appearance. They claim that an ancestor of theirs commanded the Fourquet, which was the name of the corvette when she sank, and left written record of treasure on board which they assert, as his descendant, is their property. A French sailor, Sebastian, also knows of the treasure, and is seeking it.

CHAPTER III.—After talking the matter over a form of partnership is arranged between Tom and the comte De Corlay to prosecute the search. Jessica informs her guardian, to his surprise, that she has located the Fourquet, which is not where it had been supposed, and by making a deal with the bulk can establish a legal claim to salvage. She plans to do this early next morning. Doctor White, though with some misgivings, agrees to accompany her.

CHAPTER IV

REMINING his father, after supper, that he was going with Tom to search out Sebastian, Robert went down to the landing, where he found his Yankee ally sitting in the stern of a large open launch, smoking a cigar.

"Hello, Tom," Robert greeted him. "All ready?"

"Yep. Hop aboard and we'll go," Tom answered cheerfully, albeit with a glint of remembered anger beneath the smile in his eyes. "Fine sight for a murder, Bob."

"Gad, I hope you don't mean to scrag the beggars, Tom," Robert said, considerably startled.

"I'd like to stop just short of that!" With which rather grim speech he cranked the motor, a new four cylinder installation that was quiet and could drive the heavy boat about twelve miles an hour.

Robert chuckled. "My word, but you're a cool hand, Tom. I'd almost believe you had a personal hate on the fellow."

Tom's reply to this was a non-committal, "H'm." He had no intention of speaking to the young Frenchman of Jessica's narrow escape from Sebastian. That he felt to be his personal quarrel.

"The blighter's a bad egg, Tom," observed Robert, after a moment.

"Well, you can scramble a bad egg, if you can stand the smell. Some of these very laws of ours can be used to serve the ends of pirates. I learned tonight that this jaw-rigger cruiser we're going to give the up-and-down is a Nova Scotia vessel that came in here leak log badly; and that they've put her on the beach to calk and piece her planking around the rudder post. They said her motor quit on her run along around Sable Island to Digby in that hard nor'easter about a week ago, and as their sails were rotten they ran for it, not being sure about their position until they picked up Monhegan. That all might be."

"I told you he was an artful beggar, Tom."

"You told the truth, if that's the bird. There's no flaw to be found in the story, because this is about where he would fetch up running off before a nor'easter, and his first act was to go on the crib and rip the old caulking out of her seams and cut away the planking under the counter. As they are not hauled out and just float at high water they can work for only a couple of hours a day. The rest of the time they can go plooting round hunting for the corvette. They can't be fired on with their tub wide open, and she can't be sent to bottom as long as she's already there."

Robert nodded. "He's a downy bird, Sebastian. No ordinary gullible mot. To be on the safe side, papa and I talked English that day. But I learned later that Sebastian speaks it as well as I do." He was silent for a moment, then said slowly, "Look here, Tom, all this alters our relations a good bit. I think I'd better tell you that papa and I know just about where that wreck lies—and so must Sebastian."

"The deuce you do," said Tom considerably startled.

"Yes, her position was exactly marked in the old boy's diary, and we've verified it."

Tom drew a deep breath. Here was an armor-piercing shell. Tom could see his immediate hopes and ambitions mounting to the zenith of the top of a detonated charge of trinitrotoluol.

"Just why are you telling me this, Bob?"

"Because it's no more than fair my dear Tom. In all honor I can't let you go ahead and risk getting yourself into a pack of trouble only to blik you of your share of the proceeds. That would not be according to the traditions of my service."

"Viva la France," Tom said, "and likewise, noblesse oblige. I understand that thing a little better now."

"Well then, Tom, I've learned a lot more about Yankee nerve and resource and your curious slant or things. Can't we come to an agreement about this business?"

"Unless there's some error, which I can't see, I should say you held all the trumps, Bob."

"There is no error at all, Tom. I've thumped a dipsey lead on the bottom of the old bark."

"On the bottom?"

"Right. She's lying bottom up. But we haven't all the trumps, because Sebastian holds a few."

"Then why hasn't he gone to it, Bob?"

"I think that boat of his did really open up, and he thought he'd better get her tight before he had his go. He mayn't have thought there was such a devilish rush. But there is, you see."

"Have you got her buoyed?" Tom asked.

"No need. You can almost see her old carapace at ebb tide. I doubt you ever could guess where she is, Tom. But before we go any further, you might tell me what you feel your claim amounts to."

"What I said this afternoon can stand, Bob. All I ever counted on was her guns; but if she's bottom up, like you say, it would be some job to get them out from under her. Scarcely pay the shot, or shots, because we'd have to dynamite her, and she's probably petrified by now."

"Then why not fix on a money compensation, Tom? That, of course, provided that we can give friend Sebastian the slip some way."

Tom pondered this a little. They were by this time off Pemaquid point, beginning to round that formidable bastion of the coast that can be so fearful to the inshore pilot under thick and stormy conditions of weather. Even now, still as it was, a great ground swell was bumping up disturbedly as its long skirts caught and were impeded by the shalving bottom.

"That would depend a good deal on the prospective amount, Bob," Tom said presently. "You see, I haven't the least idea how much you expect to haul down—or rather up. But it seems to me that if I were to stave off Sebastian I'd be entitled to a third after all costs were deducted, even to your expense in coming out here, of course."

"Well, I think so, too," said Robert. "I don't believe Sebastian has the least idea we're on the ground, because he would naturally expect us to come here in some such boat as his and get directly at work. There would seem to be no reason for our doing otherwise, since we've known from the start precisely where to find, or at least to look for the old hooker."

"Well, then, why the deuce didn't you?"

"Because we hadn't the remotest idea that Sebastian knew what we were up to and was taking measures to let us down. Papa and I got a fearful knockdown when you mentioned another crew that looked like Mi-quelon men. Also we had thought we might as well reconnoiter a little before spending any more money. We made the usual French mistake of trying to cut down the overhanger."

as your mine-sweeping chaps used to say when they cut loose a mine. I was with them when they were based on Lorient."

"Sebastian's apt to find it out at any minute now," Tom said, "if he hasn't learned it already."

"You're right. We haven't an hour to lose. That's why I'm making you this offer. It ought to prove a goodish bit, unless that old duck, my revered ancestor, was dippy."

"By gum, I believe you, Bob. Well then, we'll agree to split three ways, and here's my list on it."

"You're on, Tom." And they clasped hands.

Robert's trained eyes, better far than Tom's, because they had not been frequently tormented by a typewriting machine, immediately picked up the dark splaten on the smooth surface about a furlong ahead and the same distance inshore of them. He perceived also something that Tom had missed against the opaque background of rocks and trees.

"I say, Tom, that boat is yawl rigged."

Tom was able to see then, as the boat came ahead, that Robert was right. The fact was significant, an except for yachts and the larger fishing vessels, sail had become a relic of the past for the small craft of that coast. Even when used, the rig preferred was almost always that of sloop or schooner. But the Canadians had stuck to their time-honored yawls and ketches.

If the passing boat, that was running under auxiliary motor power, had been a small yacht, she most probably would have been painted white and have shown sailing lights. As neither of these details was in evidence, Tom's suspicions became aroused immediately. It was more than possible that Sebastian, learning of the De Corlays' arrival on the scene, had decided that no more time was to be lost, and was now on his way to the corvette ledge to begin his diving operations.

"By golly, Bob, that's our bird," said Tom.

"I believe you," Robert answered quietly.

Tom slowed the motor of the launch, then turned the spokes until the heavy boat described a wide arc and fell into a following position about a quarter of a mile astern of the cruiser, and directly in her wake.

CHAPTER V

FAIRLY convinced that Jessica was right about the wreck of the Fourquet, Doctor White did not allow the barnacles to form upon his motionless keel. He ate a hurried supper, then jumped aboard his launch and ran over to the village to take counsel of that local oracle and information bureau which is the general storekeeper.

"There's a diver right now over to French Bay," said the storekeeper. "David MacFarlane. He lives there. Runs up and down whenever there's a job at Bath or Boothbay or Beaubien. Dave's getting pretty old to go down himself, and I heard the other day that he's been laid up with rheumatism. But he's got a 'good working' for him that he has trained, and they say he's a first rate hand."

Here counsel the constellations in their proper places for a venture. The storekeeper went up stairs to his private apartment over the store and getting Dave MacFarlane on the telephone made strong and urgent representations. The name of Doctor White was, as has been stated, one to conjure by, which was well, as no man whose name is honorably prefixed with a Mac is apt to undertake in haste what may prove to be a fool's errand.

But such was the esteem in which Doctor White was hespen that the master diver promised to despatch his understudy within the hour, that he might make the twenty mile run around Pemaquid point to Whale Island while the weather was clear and the sea smooth. Such a flat calm was apt to be followed by thick fog toward morning; and the rocks were many and varied.

Doctor White returned to his demesne jubilant, and in a state of suppressed excitement. Halfway up the big natural stone steps laid down on the path to the house stood Jessica.

He told her about the diver.

"Then that's all right," said Jessica. "What a lark, Gurdy!"

"Perhaps. But this obviates the necessity of your being a mudlark. You don't need to go overboard tomorrow morning."

"I want to, though. There's a reason. Father was talking about salvaging claims one day, and I remember his saying that ever since there had been any laws at all about marine property, the first claim on a vessel in danger or derelict or wrecked was that of a line to her. So I want to get a line fast to this hulk, if it's no more than a cod line. I shan't feel safe about her until I do."

The doctor nodded. "Like staking a mining claim until you have it recorded."

"Nobody has located the wreck," said Jessica, "because they went on Tom's assumption that she hit the Corvete ledge and then drifted clear. They never thought of her having hit MacFarlane's ledge."

Some time in the night Jessica awoke and heard the breakers pounding against the shore. She wondered if the diver from French Bay had arrived and was moored safely off the landing in the sheltered little harbor. If this indeed were the case they could be glad of the fog to cover their early morning operation.

Jessica slipped from bed, went to a window and looked out. She did not look very far out because her vision settled up about a black mark as solid and as still as the lower level of a coal mine. The sirens alone were audibly deploring their dangers. "Up, up, up," sighed Monhegan, and to the westward Sequin answered crossly, "Rur, rur, rur." It would not be precisely the sort of morning that a sybarite would choose for a bath. Jessica thought. There might even be a good many more folk who would not have gone aboard and thirty feet deep into that glacial water for all the treasure at the bottom of the sea, but Jessica had not the slightest idea of abandoning the enterprise.

Meanwhile there seemed nothing much to do but to sleep, so she got back into bed again and slept. She awoke automatically at half past three, got up and lighted her lamp then slipped off her nightdress and into a swimming suit. She drew or a pair of moccasins, then stole out into the kitchen, to find Doctor White stealthily engaged in making coffee over the oil stove. There was need of silence, as all the treasure of Ophir and of Idd would not have countenanced that early morning expedition in Aunt Martha's eyes. It would have shaken her faith in her brother's sanity.

Doctor White himself protested it. He was worried also, because he had been down to the landing and failed to discover any sign of Dave MacFarlane's diver.

"He smelled the fog and wouldn't risk crossing Muscongus bay and rounding Pemaquid point in it," said the doctor. "I shouldn't care to wander through that rock pasture myself when the weather's so thick that you can eat it with a spoon."

"All the more reason for my going down, Gurdy," said Jessica, sipping hot coffee and nibbling at a ship's biscuit.

"It's too bitter cold, Jessica. Wait until this afternoon. It may clear and come off warm."

"That's not going to change the temperature of the water. I'm warm now, and I shan't stay in long enough to get chilled. Come on, let's go, before Aunt Martha's subconscious self sets off the alarm clock."

She went out and down the steps, the doctor following reluctantly and growlingly.

Jessica stepped into a rowboat and picked up the oars, sensible procedure before an icy plunge. The doctor had provided a coil of light line and a mooring buoy. The tide was almost at the last of the ebb, with scarcely any current.

Many Kinds of Jumps for Horses at Society Shows

The various jumps featured on horse show programs include bench jump, post and rail, board fence or gate, worm or snake fence, in-and-out, stone wall, chicken coop, water or Liverpool jump, picket fence, pole jump, triple bar, over or double over, Allen fence (post and rail with brush at the base).

Why do harness horses have docked tails? So that their tails won't interfere with the reins. The old excuse was that it strengthened their backs.

Why do they use bearing (check) reins on them? To make them carry their heads high.

Doesn't that hurt their mouths? Not if the bearing rein is properly adjusted.

Do people bet on horse shows as they do on races? Apparently not, but there is no reason why they shouldn't, counting the blue ribbon, straight, red place and yellow show.

In hunting classes why do men wear bright scarlet and the women dark colors? Because hunting is a sport, and for years it was not shared with women. Male birds wear bright plumage, and fox-hunters are rare birds.

Monument as Sun Dial

Alarms lying near the Washington monument don't have to look at their clocks or consult their appetites in order to tell what time of day it is. That is, if it's daytime and the sun is shining. The monument casts a huge, sharply marked shadow, and this shadow makes nearly two-thirds of a complete circle from sunrise to sunset. After a little experience in noting where the shadow strikes, a person can tell the time very closely, as the "dial" of this record-breaking clock is in a general way a thousand feet in diameter. Hence an hour causes a movement of some 150 to 200 feet, and even a minute will make a change of something like 3 feet. —Pathfinder Magazine.

Mexico's Government

Mexico is a federated republic of 23 states, each with a large measure of home rule and with a governor, legislature and judiciary elected by popular vote. There are also two territories and a federal district. Legislative power rests in a congress, consisting of a chamber of 135 deputies and a senate of 29 members, two from each state, all elected for two years by universal suffrage. The President is elected for four years by direct popular vote and cannot be re-elected until after an intervening term. He appoints a cabinet of ten secretaries.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
9:30 Church School. Miss Ida Packard, Superintendent. Our contest is well under way. Last Sunday the banner went to Mr. Edwards' Class. Who takes it next Sunday?

11:00 Morning Worship. Today we begin a short series on "Things of Importance in the Life of a Nation." The sub-topic today will be "Religion." Religion, pure and undefiled, is not man made. The water that runs into our houses comes through channels that man has laid; but the water flows from the hidden springs of the earth. We have devised many ways by which religion may find expression; but at best we are but channels.

6:00 Comrades of the Way. Leader, Dorothy Irish.

METHODIST CHURCH

R. C. Dalzell, Pastor
9:45 Sunday School. Supl. Mrs. Myrtle Lapham.

11:00 Morning Worship. Topic—"Reception and Retention of the Holy Spirit." Wednesday of this week is "Ash Wednesday"—the beginning of Lent. This is a time of re-consecration and examination of our devotional life. Ashes worn on the forehead symbolizes repentance. May we find forgiveness in true repentance of our sins.

6:30 Epworth League. Topic—"Washington." Leader, Mrs. Elsie Davis.

7:30 Evening Service. Topic—"Immortality Wrapped Up in Christ."

7:30 Tuesday eve. Prayer service. On Wednesday, Feb. 28, the Ladies' Aid will serve a banquet in the Church vestry at 6:30 o'clock. The after dinner speaker will be Ex-Congressman Donald B. Partridge, our distinguished neighbor of Norway. The Boy Scout orchestra, which played so acceptably at the Father's-Mother's banquet will furnish music under the direction of their leader, Mrs. D. Grover Brooks.

Many Towns of Same Name

Cause P. O. Much Trouble

There are 22 post offices in the United States named Dayton, and if ever a correspondent omits to give the state in writing his address, we are quite sure to find that the postmark on the envelope is so blurred that it cannot be deciphered, says the Rural New Yorker. That is what philosophers call the innate depravity of humankind. There are 11 Deerfields, but if you think this shows a lack of originality, consider Dime Box; there is only one post office of that name, that being in Texas. Eagle occurs in nine places, and our national bird is commemorated in 11 other post offices, in which it forms part of the name. There are 11 Ethels, but only three Marys, though Mary forms part of the name of 23 other post offices. There is only one Snook in the postal guide, which seems quite enough; there is one Zag, one Zee, one Ynot, and one Whynot.

We do not know why a place in Texas should be called Whon, or another Tom Bean, and we question the taste which named Sodom, N. Y., or Ink, in Arkansas and Missouri, or Brandy, Wis., but no doubt there was some local reason for all these names. It seems a pity to name 27 post offices Troy, and 18 Trenton, or 23 Warren. It is not surprising that 23 places are named Washington, or 13 Windsor, but these duplications sometimes cause trouble and delay in answering correspondence. There is one safe rule in writing to strangers; use black ink, write distinctly, spell out the name of the town without abbreviating, and never omit the name of the state.

Moon as Weather Prophet

Fails to Prove Correct

The moon gets blamed for a lot of things with which it has nothing to do, declares a scientist in Pathfinder Magazine. The weather bureau has failed to find proof that the moon exerts any control over the weather whatever, although its appearance in three instances does indicate the weather according to ancient proverbs.

There is nothing in the belief that moonlight causes heavy frosts. Frosts usually do occur on clear, cloudless nights, however, and it is on such nights that the moon can be seen most clearly.

A halo around the moon (or sun) does not indicate a storm, for the halo is caused by the refraction of light on tiny ice crystals in the upper atmosphere, the crystals being formed by cold air coming in contact with moist warm air—a condition that causes storms.

Sharp horns on the moon do indicate windy weather, but this is only because the winds have cleared away the dust and haze so that the illuminated portion of the moon can be seen more distinctly. There is no reason for planting and harvesting according to the moon's changes.

Andrew Johnson's Rise

From Extreme Poverty

Andrew Johnson was the son of a poor sexton. He was born December 29, 1803, at Raleigh, N. C. Fatherless at three; never attended school a day in his life. At ten was bound out to a tailor to help support his mother.

At eighteen he was established in his own tailor shop at Greenville, Tenn. As he worked, his wife read to him and at the end of the day taught him to read and write.

Most apt in oratory, his favorite hobby was debating on the political issues of the day, and before of age, his ability was recognized. At twenty he was elected city alderman and two years later, mayor. At twenty-five, was a member of Tennessee legislature and at thirty-three, a state senator—served four years—elected to congress—served ten years. Governor of Tennessee, 1853-57 and United States senator the four years following. Was appointed military governor of Tennessee in 1862 by President Lincoln and on the ticket with him—1864—elected Vice President.

At Lincoln's death he became the seventeenth President of the United States, April 15, 1865—served one term. At expiration of his term he retired to his home at Greenville, Tenn.; remained active in politics—elected United States senator in 1875, but lived to serve only four months. He died near Carters Station, Tenn., July 31, 1875, aged sixty-six.

Prayers on a Rosary

The Christian practice of repeating prayers is traceable to early times. Sozomen mentions the Hermit Paul of the Fourth century, who threw away a pebble as he recited each of his 300 daily prayers. It is not known precisely when the mechanical device of the rosary was first used. William of Malmesbury says that Godiva, who founded a religious house at Coventry in 1043, left a string of jewels, on which she had told her prayers, that it might be hung on the statue of the Blessed Virgin. Thomas of Cantimpre first mentions the word "rosary," using it in a mystical sense as Mary's rose garden.

According to a recent report, Maine is third in the list of states in the percentage of 1933 retail burdens carried by State and local agencies with a minimum of Federal aid, Connecticut and Wyoming were the states leading Maine.
